I am attempting to insert a lot of lines in cassandra (I have to insert at least 1 million of them). I've noticed that CQL does not allow one to use bulk mode by default, so I've been using a python library called apoc to insert my records using a bulk insert. My problem is that it is spending a long time in retrying. It seems to be working, but I don't think it's the best/only solution. So I've been looking for a way to do bulk inserts, and have found several suggestions that don't seem to work. One of the suggestions has been to convert the data into JSON strings, and then into a single bulk insert with the skip/limit parameters. This is what I have been doing, using the cassandra-cli to perform the insert: create table { "data": "foo", "bar": "bar", "baz": "bar" } create table { "data": "foobar", "bar": "barfoo", "baz": "foobarbar" } { "data": "barbarbar", "bar": "bazbarbar", "baz": "foobazbar" } # this is the bulk insert command insert into mykeyspace.mytable values ('barbarbar') ('foobazbar') ('barfoo') ('foobarbar') ('foobar') ('bar') 648931e174
